

Tim Foley Join's The iKBBBI Consultation Panel

The Institute of Kitchen, Bedroom & Bathroom Installers (or iKBBBI as they're better known) introduce a familiar face as the second member of their New Consultation Panel of industry experts.

Following the August announcement that The iKBBBI were creating a Consultation Panel made up from industry experts, KBB Project Consultant Tim Foley has joined the panel to support the existing team and members shape The Institute moving forward.

With over 25 years experience as a kitchen installer and contractor, Tim has appeared on ITV's Better Homes, 60 Minute Makeover and a Tonight with Trevor MacDonald special on the regeneration of Liverpool as an industry expert. He is the founder of a free-to-use resource and information guide for kitchen consumers.

T Foley Interiors operate a unique business model in partnership with kitchen-related companies and provides the opportunity to offer the consumer the best service available by working in partnership rather than in isolation. This model supports those companies who wish to promote their services via the internet.

iKBBBI Director Drew Carter commented on the appointment by saying: "Tim is well known and respected within the industry and has, in the past, been seen as the voice of installers". Drew went on to say: "Tim has been instrumental during the early research we carried out with installers and we have used information and feedback from visitors to his website forum to develop our model, ensuring we deliver outstanding value to our members".

Tim said: "This initiative for the support of installers is one that is long overdue and I applaud the iKBBBI for entering into open debate with all during its formation. They have operated in an approachable and open manner which is a breath of fresh air in this industry and a most modern way of attracting membership".
